To His Excellency, ASA S. BUSHNELL, Governor of Ohio :

STATE LIBRARIAN'S REPORT.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 15, 1898.

To the Library Commissioners of Ohio:

GENTLEMEN: Through the past year, the progress of the library movement in Ohio, of which I made mention in my last report, has been more than sustained. The State Library has increased and extended its circulation; new libraries have been opened in different parts of the State; those already established have been strengthened by private contributions, bequests and local taxation; the spirit of co-operation in the purchase and use of books has received a new impetus, and intelligent attention to the details of selection, classification and management has helped to popularize the public library and make it an important adjunct to our educational system. It has been the purpose of the State Library to keep pace with the progress and spirit of the times, to strengthen its different departments, and, under the liberal provisions of the law of 1896, to extend aid to individual and organized effort in the dissemination of healthful literature among the people.

WORK OF THE PAST YEAR.

To the shelf list completed one year ago, an author card catalogue will soon be added. The work is already well under way and we hope to report its completion before the end of another year. New shelving and book stacks have been provided for government publications and books purchased for the traveling library department. Minor changes have been made in the reading room for the comfort and convenience of patrons. Books and magazines have been sent to Ohio soldiers in camp. Five thousand two hundred and thirty-eight volumes have been accessioned, catalogued, and placed on the shelves since our last report—a record without parallel in the history of the library.

CHARACTER OF BOOKS ADDED.

Attention is invited to the list of books added within the past year. It will be found that comparatively few pamphlets are included. At small expense hundreds of these might have been added to the accession register. With limited room it would be unwise, however, to crowd the shelves with matter of no permanent value. Pamphlet literature should be carefully sifted and classified. The history of the State Library would seem to indicate that valuable pamphlets should be bound and placed on the shelves with other volumes. About three hundred of these, now at the state bindery, will soon be added to the library.

In the selection of books use has constantly been made of the advice and experience of those qualified to judge. Last year about five hundred volumes were purchased to complete the list named in the model A. L. A. Library exhibited at the World's Fair. This year more than twelve hundred volumes from the catalogue of the Teacher's Library of New York have been selected for the traveling library department. They have not yet been accessioned and are not included in the additions for this year. The list will appear in the next annual report.

LOCAL HISTORY.

An effort has been made to add to the department of Ohio local history. The successful prosecution of this work requires more time than the librarian finds at his disposal. Something has been accomplished, however, through correspondence.

Oliver Johnson, in his admirable volume, "Garrison and His Times," names among the newspapers of the National Anti-Slavery Society, The Liberator, published in Boston; The National Anti-Slavery Standard, in New York; The Pennsylvania Freeman, in Philadelphia; The Anti-Slavery Bugle, in Salem, Ohio; and The Herald of Freedom, in Concord, N. H. "The last mentioned paper," he tells us, "was discontinued in 1846, or thereabouts; while the Freeman was united with the Standard in 1855. The Bugle was not discontinued till near the date of emancipation". The Liberator and the Standard continued in the field till the thirteenth amendment to the constitution was adopted.

It will be noted that the Anti-Slavery Bugle was the only Garrisonian paper west of the Alleghanies. It was published in the county that gave to "the cause" the Coppock brothers of Harper's Ferry fame. It at one time had a wide circulation. It made eastern Ohio a storm centre of agitation in the ante bellum days.

A diligent search was made recently for the files of the Bugle. The first six volumes were found, purchased, bound and placed in the library. They cover the period 1845-51.

Arrangements have been made to secure the publications of the "Firelands Pioneer" that have been issued since 1888. This will complete to date the set in the library.

Seven Ohio county histories and atlases have been included among late additions, making this department almost complete.

COUNTY HISTORIES OF NORTHWEST TERRITORY.

The centennial anniversary of the admission of Ohio into the Union, to be celebrated at Toledo, will be an event of interest to the states that constitute what was the Northwest Territory, under the Ordinance of 1787. It will doubtless bring to light much matter of historic value relating to the settlement and early development of this section. Partly in anticipation of this event, inquiry has been made in regard to histories of counties of Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin. Many of these can now be purchased at reasonable prices. It would seem that Ohio, the first State to be carved out of the "Old Northwest," should make a creditable collection before it is too late, of the local histories of that region over which our first territorial governors held sway.

BOOKS ON SLAVERY.

On the subject of slavery, eighteen volumes have been added, bearing dates from 1835 to 1862. Two of these are volumes of rare pamphlets.

FOREIGN PERIODICALS.

Prior to our last annual report there were no files of English newspapers in the Ohio State Library. Within the past year, many valuable additions have been made to the department of foreign periodical literature. The list includes the following: Pall Mall Gazette, 1865-66, 8 volumes; Illustrated London News, 1842-94, 105 volumes; Literary Gazette (London), 1825-42, 18 volumes; Cobbett's Political Register, 1817-30, 39 volumes; Annual Register, 1758-1849, 95 volumes; Canadian Magazine, 1893-97, 9 volumes; Friend of India (Serampore), 1859-63, 4 volumes; London Graphic, 1877-95, 36 volumes.

LEGISLATIVE AID.

The Seventy-third General Assembly, at its recent session, did much to encourage library interests throughout the State, enacted an excellent law for the distribution of public documents through the State Library, made liberal provision for the publication of Howe's Historical Collections and the works of the State Archaeological and Historical Society, and made appropriation ample to meet the demands of the traveling library system successfully inaugurated one year ago. These acts will be found in the appendix to this report. It will be seen that they are all in the line of progress. One of them extends the privileges of the Cincinnati Public Library to Hamilton county; another makes the establishment of a public library, under certain conditions, compulsory. Both suggest great future possibilities. It is needless to say that results will be carefully noted. The two hundred volumes of each Ohio publication hereafter to be placed at the disposal of the State Library will enable it to supply the smaller libraries of Ohio, and to extend its list of exchanges to the larger libraries of other states. The re-issue of large editions of popular historic works will meet with general approval. The people want them and will read them. The publication of such works should be continued, even if it be necessary to curtail the number of dry statistical reports which are of interest to but a fractional part of one per cent. of the population of the State. The greater portion of the "Historical Collections" and the "Archaeological and Historical" publications go to the members of the General Assembly. Senators and Representatives, if requested, will doubtless be pleased to furnish these works to public libraries in their respective districts.

CATALOGUE.

Frequent requests are made for catalogues of books in the different departments of the library. This is especially true with reference to the traveling library department. At present the circulation of such a catalogue, we are led to believe, would not bring satisfactory results. It would be more disappointing to patrons than to those in charge of the library. Many requests would be made for the same book. The means at our command will not enable us to carry on very extensively the duplication of books. In the not distant future appropriations may enable us to meet the popular demand for a new catalogue. At present, if patrons will indicate the class of books desired, a satisfactory selection can usually be made. Upon request a list of books will be mailed to the borrowers for approval before shipment is made.

LIBRARY MEETINGS.

The American Library Association held its annual meeting at Lakewood-on-Chautauqua, New York, July 4-8. The Library Section of the Ohio Teachers' Association met at Put in Bay, June 30; and the Ohio Library Association at Dayton, October 12-13. At all these meetings our library staff was represented. At the Lakewood and Dayton meetings members of the Board of Commissioners were also present.

ORGAN OF THE OHIO LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.

Public Libraries, published by the Library Bureau of Chicago, has been made the official organ of the Ohio Library Association. The December number will contain a full account of the Dayton meeting and other matter of special interest to the friends of library extension in the State.

COUNTY TRAVELING LIBRARIES.

Mr. A. Sheldon, of Norwalk, at the Dayton meeting suggested that the traveling library system could be successfully operated in counties with the county seat as a center of distribution. This has already been tested with satisfactory results in a few counties of Wisconsin. Legislation permitting county library organization would doubtless aid the State Library in the work it has undertaken.

LITERATURE SENT TO SOLDIERS.

The following literature, donated by friends, was forwarded through the State Library to the Ohio Volunteers in the Spanish-American War: papers, 1,794; magazines, 3,519; books, 271; pamphlets, 159; total, 5,743. Poor transportation facilities and frequent shifting of camps prevented this patriotic enterprise from accomplishing all that might have been desired. Distribution at so great a distance proved costly and in other respects not entirely satisfactory. A number of letters were received from army officers, however, expressing appreciation of the kindly interest of those donating and forwarding the books.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY AND THE PUBLIC SCHOOL.

One of the encouraging signs of the times, from an educational point of view, is seen in the cordial relations growing up between the public library and the public school. The organization of the Library Section of the Ohio State Teachers' Association was mentioned in our last report. At the Put in Bay meeting of that association, Superintendent Jones, of Massillon, was appointed a delegate to the Ohio Library Association. He was present at the Dayton meeting as were also State School Commissioner, L. D. Bonebrake and other prominent educators of the State. Co-operation was the keynote of a number of the addresses. O. T. Corson, ex-Commissioner of Common Schools and editor of the Ohio Educational Monthly, has given much space in that excellent journal to the library interests of the State. We are under many obligations to these and other friends who have aided to make the public library, including the State Library, more useful to the public schools.

TRAVELING LIBRARIES.

Much space has been devoted in previous reports to the traveling library. The system continues to work well and seems destined to grow more popular. Almost every mail brings from a lengthening list of patrons words of appreciation and encouragement. A few figures will best tell the story of what has been done in this department:

Traveling libraries sent out for year ending September 1, 1897.....	61
Traveling libraries sent out for year ending September 1, 1898.....	378

Libraries sent out for the past year have been distributed as follows :

To Women's Clubs.....	69
To Schools	89
To Granges.....	92
To other organizations.....	128

MORE ROOM NEEDED.

Additional room for books is much needed. Practically all the shelf space has been utilized. Provision must soon be made for the continued growth of the State Library.

CONCLUSION.

In conclusion, I invite your attention again to the appendix. In it will be found many matters of general interest to the library profession.

APPENDIX.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY IN OHIO.

Address Delivered by J. A. Shawan, Superintendent of Columbus Schools, at Meeting of the Library Section of the Ohio Teachers' Association, Put in Bay, June 30, 1898.

"Educated, by Jove! Educated," was the gleeful shout of a graduate of a New England college, not many years ago, as he waived his much prized parchment over his head on commencement day. More noted for conviviality than for hard study, it is not strange that he failed to see the difference between graduation and education. The popular idea that graduation ends all must give place to the truer and more wholesome idea that it marks but the beginning of true intellectual life. School training is the foundation, and the stability and strength of the future structure will depend in no small degree upon the character of that foundation. How often it happens that on account of rotten stone, soft brick, freezing and thawing and general carelessness in the selection of material and in doing the work, it becomes necessary to tear away the foundation in part or wholly and to rebuild before further progress is possible. On the other hand, how often it happens that a good foundation, built of excellent materials and under the most favorable circumstances, is allowed to stand until by the action of wind and weather it is unfit to support the superstructure which belongs to it. And even if completed, the style of architecture is out of harmony with the age to which it belongs. In other words, many graduates out-Van Winkle Van Winkle himself in the profundness of the slumber that steals upon them when they think that they have been educated.

The library is the legitimate supplement and complement of the work of the schools. How its influence may enter into the web and woof of the foundation, has already been shown by those who have preceded me. How it has, and may continue to reach out and to touch the entire community, is in a large measure the object of this paper to show.

One of the principles of the Ordinance of 1787 was that the means of education should be forever encouraged in the Northwest Territory. Recognizing the importance of this principle, the early settlers of this territory began to lay their plans at a very early day. Even before the little log school house had been erected, the public library began its work.

The first library of which we have any authentic history was the Putnam Family Library, established at Belpre as early as 1795 by Colonel Israel Putnam. It was afterwards known as the "Belpre Farmers' Library," and still later as the "Belpre Library." The organization was dissolved in 1815 or 1816. General Israel Putnam had a fine library, rich in history, travel and belles-lettres. At his death in 1790, this library was divided among his heirs, and his son brought a large part of it to Ohio, which formed the nucleus of the Putnam Family Library. With the true spirit of fellowship, a stock company was formed and the library put into circulation for the benefit of all the settlers who were willing to share the burdens of its maintenance. Thus, in a large sense, it became a public library. The following was found September 2, 1801, in the records of the probate office of Washington county as an item in the inventory of the estate of Jonathan Stone:

"MARIETTA, OHIO, Oct. 26, 1796.

"Received of Jonathan Stone, by hand of Benjamin Mills, Ten Dollars, for his share in the Putnam Family Library.

"W. P. PUTNAM, Clerk."

About twenty-three volumes which belong to this library are still in existence. Several of the books have the marks of the different libraries; e. g., one volume, the property of Captain Geo. Dana, entitled "John Locke's Essays on Human Understanding," published in 1793, is No. 5 in the "Putnam Family Library," but was afterwards changed to No. 6, "Belpre Library."

The second public library was put into operation at Cincinnati, on March 6, 1802, with L. Kerr as librarian. Thirty-four shares of $10.00 each were sold, Arthur St. Clair being among the subscribers. But for some reason it ceased to exist at an early day. The celebrated "Coonskin Library," which was long supposed to be the first in the State, was not organized until 1804, in Ames township, Athens county. It was incorporated February 19, 1810, as the "Western Library Association." The Dayton Library Society was incorporated February 21, 1805. A library was established at Granville, which was then in Fairfield county, January 26, 1807, and another at Newton, Hamilton county, February 10, 1808.

The good work done by these pioneer libraries is amply attested by the pioneer thinkers of the Buckeye State. Says Amos Dunham, who built his log cabin in the woods ten miles south of Marietta, in 1802: "The long winter evenings were rather tedious, and in order to make them pass more smoothly, by great exertion I purchased a share in the Belpre Library, six miles distant. From this I promised myself much entertainment, but another obstacle presented itself—I had no candles; however, the woods afforded me plenty of pine knots—with these I made torches by which I could read, though I nearly spoiled my eyes. Many a night have I passed in this manner till twelve or one o'clock reading to my wife, while she was hatchelling, carding or spinning."

The early patrons of the "Coonskin Library" were of the same intelligent class, ever hungering after knowledge. So scarce was money, that Judge A. G. Brown declares that he can scarce remember ever having seen a piece of coin until he was a well-grown boy. But true to their Yankee instincts, these early settlers were not long in devising a medium of exchange that answered all purposes, barring the slight inconvenience of handling and carrying it about in the vest pocket. Those were the days of John Jacob Astor. They were, also, the days when wolves, bears, coons and other fur-bearing animals abounded. Thus the means were not wanting. Samuel Brown, going to Boston on a business trip, was loaded down with skins to be converted into books for a Western Library. Thomas Ewing threw into the enterprise all his accumulated wealth, which consisted of "ten coon skins." On the 17th of December, 1804, fifty-one books thus purchased were accepted, Ephraim Cutler elected librarian and the Western Library Association began its work. What a boon for the young pioneers who were thirsting for knowledge! Says Thomas Ewing of this early library: "It was well selected; the library of the Vatican was nothing to it, and there never was a library better read."

Is it any wonder that we have a great State and have furnished great men to the nation and to the world, when the elements which entered into its early citizenship are taken into account? Burning with unquenchable thirst to drink from the fountain of knowledge and an unsatisfiable hungering for intellectual food, they were the elements of which heroes are made. We may justly feel as proud of the early settlers of Ohio as of those who first cast their lots on the "wild New England shore." Plant the church, the school house, the library, for they are the harbingers of civilization and humanity, but the enemies of barbarism and inhumanity.

From these early beginnings, small though they seem, the work has grown to its magnificent proportions of the present day. The work moved slowly but steadily forward until 1854, when a general revival set in by the establishment of the Ohio School Library prepared for every school district in the State. The law which distributed this magnificent collection of books marks the beginning of a more liberal policy in the management of public libraries. Subscription gave place to taxation and the shelves were thrown open to all. Up to that date, according to reports sent in to the Commissioner of Education for the United States, there were in this State forty-four libraries.

Of these only three were strictly public libraries—the State Library at Columbus and the public libraries of Cincinnati and Dayton. Only three of the public school libraries in existence at that time have maintained a continued organization to the present—the Hughes and Woodward High School Libraries of Cincinnati and the Public School Library of Troy. The Boys' Industrial School Library at Lancaster was established under the provisions for the Ohio School Library in 1854.

The Library of the Ohio Institution for the Deaf and Dumb was established at Columbus in 1851, and now contains between 3,000 and 4,000 volumes, but its circulation was very properly limited to those attending the institution. The number of College, Seminary, and Law School libraries organized up to 1854 was twenty-six. The oldest of these was the Ohio University Library, antedating any other college library by at least twenty years. It may be interesting to note that the libraries of the Cincinnati Law School and Lane Theological Seminary were established in 1836, just two generations ago. These did their work in furnishing intellectual food for the leaders of thought in church and State and, in this way, exerted a wonderful influence on the young commonwealth. Prior to 1854, there were eight society libraries covering science, history, law and medicine. With the exception of the Athenaeum of Zanesville, all of these special libraries were located in Cincinnati.

Is it any wonder that with the enterprise of her early citizens and with a monopoly of the literary wealth of the State during the first half of the 19th century, that the City of the Ohio Valley should take the lead in literary productions and scholastic attainments? Such a result was natural and to be expected. But since the general diffusion of libraries in 1854, a new spirit has taken possession of all quarters of the State, and she must look well to her laurels in the future or she will be outstripped by the cities of the lake and all may revolve around the great center at Columbus.

The movement in 1854 to establish the common school library is an indication of the grasp which the early educators had of the importance of collateral work in developing literary attainment and high moral ideals. It is sometimes charged that too much encouragement is being given to the ordinary class of people; that many a child is inspired to seek a profession who ought to follow the plow or pound the anvil. I see no easier way of establishing class distinction in America than to discourage the sons and daughters of our industrious yeomanry and working men. The well-to-do are not going to ask their young to don overalls. Brains or no brains they are to be given the first chance at the professions and the so-called respectable vocations of life. Every instinct of Americanism cries out against such unjust sentiments and demands that every son and daughter of America be given the same opportunity to develop what is in him. The public school system, and especially the high-school, is the great leveler in American Society. Water will seek its own level in any event; let the sifting process go on; but give to each the same chance to rise to the full measure of his ability. The instructor who does not teach that labor is honorable, is making a serious blunder, and he who uses as a motive to inspire his boys to greater effort, the idea that they may fit themselves for something better than a common laborer, commits a crime against American institutions. The inspiration of a lofty ambition is elevating and ennobling, but an appeal to a selfish ambition that degrades any class of labor, is an insult to a large per cent. of the patrons of every school. The college graduate may not consider it a dishonor to step out of classic halls into mechanical, industrial and agricultural pursuits. Intelligence is a benediction to all classes of labor. Cincinnati and Israel Putnam left their plows to fight the battles of their country. George Washington left the presidency of the United States to resume the quiet duties of farm life at Mt. Vernon. Lincoln and Garfield left the log cabin in the wilderness of Kentucky and the tow path of the Erie Canal to perform the most important duties of state. Elihu Burritt gave up the hammer of the blacksmith to become the greatest linguist of his age because he had access to the Worcester Library. Opportunity was all that was needed to change Grant from a tanner of skins to a tanner of rebels. "Where there is a will there's a way," is not always true, but where there's a way, will and ability always come to the front. The pessimist must remember that we are living in an age not of degenerated mankind, but the ages of the Deweys and the Hobsons and the four thousand volunteers who offered to go into the jaws of death to close up Santiago's harbor, any seven of whom could have assisted Hobson in the work just as well as those who were chosen.

The Ohio School Library has done its part in the formation of ideals. It is due to its work in a large measure that the poor, the ordinary citizen has at his door the food that develops intellectual manhood. How many men have begun to think as they have read these books, can never be estimated. Personally, I wish to acknowledge a lasting obligation for the entertainment, the hopes, the ambitions that were awakened by ready access to this old library. Living in the same house where it was located, it was my daily companion and friend. It will be interesting to note the class of books which were first in these libraries. The first series contained the following, many of which are still standard books and are included in our pupil's reading course: The Swiss Family Robinson, two volumes; Adventures of Daniel Boone; Abbott's History of Marie Antoinette; the Young Sailor; Sanford and Merton; Conquest and Self-Conquest; Boyhood of Great Men; Abbott's History of Alexander the Great; Live and Let Live; Benjamin Franklin; Lives of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence; Howe's Mechanics; Hallam's Middle Ages; Two Years Before the Mast; The Pursuit of Knowledge under Difficulties, two volumes; Russia As it Is; Letters to Young Ladies; Curran and his Contemporaries; Life of Sir Isaac Newton; Lives of Celebrated Female Sovereigns, two volumes; Life of Francis Marion; The Merchant; The Sketch Book; Life of General Lafayette; Taylor's History of Ohio, to 1787. This series consisted of twenty-nine volumes at a cost of $15.00 per set. Other series were added, enlarging the scope and usefulness.

The question has often been asked, what has become of these libraries? It is not strange that after a lapse of forty years, many of these books should be worn out, strayed or stolen. Occasionally one finds in a most unexpected place, a volume bound in leather with "Ohio School Library" stamped on the cover. Many of these libraries have become the nuclei of libraries of vast proportions, for a new era of libraries has developed since 1854.

The report of the Bureau of Education for 1895-6 containing statistics from libraries of 1,000 volumes or more shows that there were in the United States in 1896, 4,026 libraries with 33,051,872 volumes, to say nothing of pamphlets; an increase in five years of 523 libraries and 7,074,229 volumes, or 27.23 per cent. Ohio had in 1896, 202 libraries with 1,587,891 volumes; an increase of 29 libraries and 329,455 volumes, or 26.18 per cent. in five years. The three great cities of Ohio contained at that time libraries aggregating as follows: Cincinnati, 390,000 volumes; Cleveland, 250,000 volumes; Columbus, 195,000 volumes; in other words, Cincinnati has a little more than one volume per inhabitant; Cleveland about two-thirds of a volume; Columbus about one and one-half volumes. Columbus enjoys the unusual advantage of having several libraries supported by taxation: The Public Library of 25,000 volumes, controlled by a board appointed by the city council; the Public School Library of 30,000 volumes; the State Library of 70,000 volumes; the State University Library of 20,000 volumes; the Supreme Court Library of 17,000 volumes; besides other institutions located in the city with libraries aggregating 15,000. Many of the smaller towns and cities of the State have a much larger pro rata than the above, as the number of volumes in their libraries is many times their population. I have no doubt that there are many libraries containing more than a thousand volumes which are not included in the above report. If we could have statistics from all the circulating and supplementary libraries of whatever size, the facts, no doubt, would be surprising and gratifying.

Much might be said about the workings of these libraries, but the field is too vast to occupy our time to any great extent at present. The statistics showing the class of books read would no doubt be interesting and provoke discussion, but we forbear, believing that even a cheap novel is more restful and more healthful, morally as well as physically, than brooding over the misfortunes of the day or week. But furnishing such reading is a small part of the work done by our libraries, and is likely to grow less with each decade. The establishment of supplementary departments and branch libraries is bringing their influence into more intimate relations with the schools and patrons and helping to form a taste for the best books. The issuance of catalogues, which, it must be admitted, costs labor and money, throws open the resources of the library to those who are not expert librarians or familiar with its contents by daily association. It is of very little satisfaction to have a bank account if one does not know how large it is or is not able to draw on it.

The recent departure from the usual custom of our State Library by which its contents are thrown open to every section of the State, is another innovation which will be appreciated by all, and will greatly increase the circulation of good books. The steps necessary to be taken by clubs and schools in order to get these books, I am sure that our presiding officer, the state librarian, will take great pleasure in explaining.

Co operation must be the watchword of the future. "Hang together or hang separately," is the natural law by which we are bound. Thus hand in hand the public library and the public school will work for a broader intellectuality, a deeper morality and a happier and truer citizenship.

NOTES FROM THE LIBRARY FIELD.

From Addresses at the Dayton Meeting, October 12-13, 1898.

"And what is the public library for?"

"To furnish good literature to the public; to give pleasant reading to the reader for pleasure; to supply useful books to the serious student; to enrich seekers in special paths of knowledge with the best of science, mechanics, the arts, history, travel; to stimulate club activities among men and women; and, best of all, to become the complement of that great educational institution of the State—the public school system; not merely to supplement it, not to stand outside of it, but to become a component and equally important part of the educational activities of the State with the public school system. The library should be found moving in every avenue of human endeavor, pushing, compelling, helping. It should count largely in overcoming the powers of greed, selfishness, and ignorance.

"It is the experience of all of us, I think, an experience of surprise, to find ignorance of the true work of the library, of its rich contents, its true possibilities, among people who are otherwise well informed. It has been my experience, not once but scores of times, that those who are informed upon general subjects—young men of fair education—come to me and ask, what is in your library? How do we get books? They say: We don't like to go to the library because we don't know how to find what we want; we don't know what is there. It was proposed to me by an attorney of this city the other day, as an entirely original idea on this subject, that the trustees ought to provide a catalogue of the contents of the library. Have we not made the mistake of spending too much time and labor in preparing catalogues for use of the public, when our real business is to prepare a public for the use of the catalogue?

"How are we to do this work? How are we to get at the public? How are we to force ourselves upon the people so that they cannot ignore the library, and so that it will become to the great majority of them necessary for their daily life? By collecting books merely? By adopting scientific methods of classification? By exhibiting complete card catalogues? By elaborating systems of administration? All these things are good, and all these things are necessary—they are vital in the administration and operation of any successful library, of any library which has a right to exist. Yet they are but the means to an end; and if we consider, when we have attained these, that we have come to an end, we have lost all the work that has gone before. The true work of the library is to compel the public, the people, to come in, and if they will not come in, to go out to them. * * *

* * "Where is the most inviting field for invasion by the public library? There is but one answer and you know it—all of you. It is the public school. I would, if necessary, abandon every other method of reaching the public for the purpose of emphasizing and building up to the largest extent the work in the public schools. There are two or three cities in the State that do this now upon differing plans. All of them are doing good. But what shall we say of the large number of libraries of the State which do nothing for the public schools excepting to supply the school children with books as they come to the library along with the other patrons—the adult patrons? It does seem to me that there is your work; that the libraries of the State should wake up to the vital importance of this field of endeavor. It is open, it is ready, and I think that there is a growing tendency on the part of boards of education, and of those in charge of the schools, to encourage practical co-operation between these two educational agencies."—Frank Conover, in the President's Address.

"I want to say a word in regard to one phase of the educational work in Ohio, that it seems to me must be of interest to this association—that is the reading circle work. Seventeen years ago a plan was adopted and the reading circle was organized, and there has never been anything in the State of Ohio that has worked so much good to the teachers, and consequently to the schools of the State, as the Ohio teachers' reading circle. It is managed by a board of control, consisting of eight members, two elected annually by the State Association. During the past year, out of 22,000 teachers in the State, we had 6,363 who had read the work of the circle for the year, and 628 who received diplomas at the last meeting, showing that they had read the work of four years.

"Then, in connection with this a pupils' circle was organized, which included the third year in our graded schools. This reading runs in three lines, literature proper, history and biography, science and nature study, three books required. Other books are suggested—three books are required that are thought to be adapted to the third year, and then the fourth year, and so on, through the high school. A certificate is given to any pupil in the third year of any school whose teacher will certify that he has satisfactorily read those books. When he has read the work of the four years he receives a diploma without charge. In the past year 9,056 children of the State received certificates for having read one year's course, and over 700 received diplomas for having read the work of four years.

"Here is a field in which the schools and libraries come together, and where the library can do a great amount of good. We hope to make the library very useful, not a supplement, as the chairman said, but a component part of our school system.

"This is an important field of the work, and the State Library, with the new feature that has been adopted, can reach the township schools throughout the State."—Superintendent E. A. Jones, Delegate from the Ohio State Teachers' Association.

"Once persuade the people that they can have a library if they want it, and the battle is half won. A collection of fifty good books, owned by an association, kept in a private house and loaned to members on one stated day in the week by the lady of the house, is easily within the reach of every neighborhood of a dozen houses in any country district of the state; and such a little library is an infinite advance over no library at all. A library of some size is therefore a possibility in any village where the people want better things than they now have. The size of the collection will depend, of course, upon the wealth and the willingness of the people who support it. The starting point, then, is to convince the intelligent people of the place that they can have a library."—Ashley, in a paper on "Starting a Small Library."

"We have reached a new day in the matter of school management, when the public school is reaching out to have a dozen books in the school room, forty books, a hundred books, or a public library in the town. And you, as librarians, have a large work to do to make the books serviceable to the children. Unquestionably there is a large work for the teachers, and they must suggest, they must direct, they must give the children the spirit, the desire, the ambition to read books, love books, make books companions with and of themselves. And so it occurs to me that the teacher and the librarian should join hands in this great work. I know they do, where each is trying to do his duty."—L. D. Bonebrake, State Commissioner of Common Schools.

LIBRARY EXTENSION.

Libraries have been started at Coshocton, Lisbon, Logan and Massillon. The libraries at Marysville, Painesville, Pleasant Ridge and Warren have been reorganized as free public libraries, with their work greatly enlarged; Bellefontaine, Cedarville College, Delaware, Franklin, Fredericktown, Greenfield, Hallsville, Mogadore, St. Paul, Versailles, Washington Court House and Wilmington are reported as making the beginnings of a library for their respective towns. It is worthy of note that of the libraries mentioned above, the Lepper Library, at Lisbon, was founded on a gift of $11,000 from Mrs. Lepper, of Toledo, the citizens of Lisbon contributing $5,000 for a site on which a beautiful new building has been erected; and that the McClymonds Library, at Massillon, was made possible by the gift of $10,000 from J. W. McClymonds, and the beautiful home of the late Nahum Russell from his two daughters, to be remodeled as a library building. The movement which made the library at Warren a free public library was started by W. E. Harmon, C. E. Wood and C. B. Harmon, who offered to give $3,000 in cash and guaranteed $100 per year for ten years, provided the citizens would raise an additional $2,000 and pledge $100 for ten years; a bill was then introduced and passed the State Legislature, to provide a tax levy—this bill is described later in this report as the first compulsory library law in Ohio.

The trustees of the Cincinnati Public Library have reorganized under a new law making them independent of the Board of Education, and making the library free to the county by levying a tax of three-tenths of a mill on the entire county.

The Circleville Public Library has begun to reclassify by the Decimal system.

The Case Library of Cleveland has greatly strengthened its departments of engineering and technical literature. It has given a number of interesting exhibits on subjects allied to books and art.

The Cleveland Public Library on January 1st moved its West Side Branch into a beautiful new building; during the year the reference library has been reclassified and shelf listed.

The Public School Library of Columbus has established three branch libraries in school buildings.

The Marysville Public Library has reclassified by the Decimal system and published a neat catalogue.

The Dayton Public Library has put current periodicals into circulation, and has opened a branch delivery station.

The Defiance Public Library invested $1,000 in books of reference.

The McWhinney Free School Library of Greenville has a new card catalogue.

The Lancaster Public Library has moved into a larger and pleasanter room and greatly enlarged its work.

The Mechanical Institute Library of Lebanon gave a course of free lectures at the library last winter with good results.

The Mt. Vernon Public Library had a reference room fitted up, with the result of more than doubling the reference use of the library.

The Sidney Public Library has added about 1,200 new books—among them some important reference works; the library has been reclassified by the Decimal system, and recatalogued.

The Warder Library of Springfield has been reclassified by the Decimal system, and recatalogued. A new printed finding list is to be issued this fall.

The I. O. O. F. Public Library of Steubenville has moved into a larger, pleasanter room.

The Toledo Public Library has planned a children's room.

The Urbana Public Library has purchased a new building, which is being handsomely fitted up.

The Wilmington Public Library has opened a reading room.

The Xenia Library has extended the hours of opening.

The Reuben McMillen Free Public Library of Youngstown has purchased, with funds largely raised by public subscription, a building which is being refitted for the library. It has also begun issuing books to the schools in sets of 25, and has printed a little catalogue of these school libraries.

AMONG THE COLLEGE LIBRARIES.

The Antioch College Library has secured an appropriation for a new card catalogue.

The Denison University Library has been opened by courtesy to the citizens of the town and county as a reference library.

The Hiram College Library has a new card catalogue.

Ohio University Library has allowed the women's clubs of the town the use of the library.

Ohio Wesleyan University Library has moved into a new building, one of the finest library buildings in the State, and has reclassified the library by the Decimal system.

St. Xavier College Library of Cincinnati has refitted its reference room with modern improvements, added about 1,000 new volumes, and recatalogued the library.

Of special interest to all is the growth of the traveling libraries sent out from the State Library; 378 of these libraries have been sent out during the past year, the greater number of them being sent to the granges, the women's clubs and the schools. An appropriation of $4,000 per year to be used in buying books for these libraries for the next two years was granted by the last Legislature. This Legislature also passed the first compulsory law for Ohio: it provides "that in all cities with a population of between 5,000 and 10,000 having already a free incorporated library, the local board of education must levy a tax of not less than three-tenths and not over five-tenths of a mill, to be known as a public library fund, and to be paid over to the trustees of the library and used in purchase of books or for general expenses."

No review of the library progress of the State for the past year would be complete without noting the increased appreciation of the value of trained workers. The Dayton Public Library last June completed the two years training course for its assistants and apprentices. Case Library of Cleveland had a three months class last spring, while six weeks summer schools were conducted at the Ohio State University and at the Cleveland Public Library, and there were also during the year a number of students from this State attending the various regular library schools in the country. Some of the new libraries have been organized and several old ones reclassified and catalogued by experts called in for the work.

The foregoing is but a partial record of State growth for the year, but the difficulty with which it has been gotten together proves the need of some systematized plan for obtaining such information.

"Your committee has obtained and sent to the secretary over 100 new names of persons not members of the O. L. A. who might be interested in the Association. Twenty-one libraries have been reported as needing and welcoming help in the way of suggestions as to methods of organization and administration."—From Report of Committee read by Miss Linda A. Eastman.

"At the convention in Piqua, your committee reported that the club women had quickly taken advantage of the generous offer of the Library Commission; also, that by the aid of these libraries, another department of our state work was made practicable, namely: the forming of country clubs. The benefits derived from these books were so many and so far reaching that there was at this convention a strong desire expressed that the next Legislature be asked to make a special appropriation for traveling libraries as the libraries sent out were mainly made up of the books in the State Library, which could not fill the increasing demand, and many of these were of a date too remote to make them useful to the clubs and others desiring recent developments on all subjects. Your committee urged the club women of the state to work in every possible way to create a demand for such an appropriation, in order that Ohio might have a system of traveling libraries commensurate with her rank among her sister states in other respects.

"It now gives your committee great pleasure to be able to report that a special appropriation was made by our last Legislature, and that for two years at least, Ohio will have four thousand dollars per annum for traveling libraries; furthermore, that it is able to assure you that Ohio's system of traveling libraries is conducted on the plans laid down by the most thoughtful library workers and is more generous than in most states, in that it only asks that transportation be paid while other states demand a fee. It is also a pleasure to record now, as in all other reports, the uniform courtesy and interest shown by the State Library Board to the club women and all others wanting books, and to say further that the wise discrimination in the choice of the books sent out, adds largely to the good effect of these libraries. And to report finally that the efficiency of these libraries will be largely increased in the near future by the addition of carefully selected pictures, illustrating the various topics of study.

"Although the club women were at first the largest users of these books, the proportions have changed and all classes are calling for them, the grange and the schools being in the lead."—From Report of Library Committee, Federation of Women's Clubs.

TRAVELING LIBRARIES.

HOW TO GET THEM.

OBJECTS: 1—To furnish good literature to the public. 2—To strengthen small libraries. 3—To create an interest in the establishment of new libraries.

A Traveling Library is a collection of from twenty-five to thirty-five books sent out by the State Library to a reading club, an association of citizens, a board of education or a public library, to be kept three months with privilege of renewal.

The State Library will furnish forms for application to those wishing to receive a Traveling Library.

On receipt of a request on the forms furnished by the State Library, properly filled by the members of the club, the officers of a free public library, board of education, or other association, the books will be shipped. The parties receiving the books must pay transportation both ways.

No catalogues of books in the circulating department of the State Library are sent to patrons, for the following reasons: 1—We have no appropriation for the publication of a catalogue. 2—We are continually adding new books, and a catalogue would not show what could be furnished. 3—Thousands of books are continually in circulation, and we would rarely be able to furnish the list made from a catalogue.

Where patrons desire it, a list of books can be made in accordance with general directions and submitted for approval before the Traveling Library is shipped.

If a list of the books desired is sent with the application, it will be furnished as nearly as possible; if only the general subjects are named, books relating to those subjects will be sent.

The Ohio State Library desires a wider circulation for its Traveling Libraries. Those interested are invited to correspond.

STATE LIBRARIAN.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

The State Library will be open, except Sundays and holidays, from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M. During the months of July and August the library will be closed at 4 P. M. During the sessions of the Legislature the library will be open, except Saturday, till 9 P. M.

All citizens of the State will be permitted to draw books in accordance with the following rules:

All State officers elected by the people or appointed by the governor may draw books by giving receipt.

Citizens who desire to draw books may do so on furnishing the library board a satisfactory guarantee, or through the public library in their city.

No one shall keep from the library more than two volumes at one time, nor any volume more than two weeks without renewal.

One renewal will be allowed and the books may be kept for two weeks from the date of renewal.

No borrower shall keep a book more than three days after notice has been mailed to his address that it is wanted at the library, or that the book is due.

Any book not returned after one week's notice may be sent for at the expense of the borrower.

Any book not returned after one month's notice may be considered lost, in which case the borrower shall pay its full value, or the value of the set to which it belongs.

All expenses connected with the issue of the books and their return shall be paid by the borrower.

Any person failing to return a book within one week, after notice has been mailed, forfeits the privileges of the library until reinstated by the board.

The board will determine what books may not be taken from the library.
